“I don’t want a community, I need to write papers!”

“No time to improve my code, it just needs to work!”

- Does this sound familiar?
- Can we persuade researchers to treat research software as a first class output of academia?
- How can a community of professional practice raise the visibility of this work and the role of research software?

Let’s see what an RSE Community of Practice can do for researchers who code. Ask us about our RSE community!

Community raises awareness

- of good RSE practice
- of the importance of research software with resources
- of software and publication guidelines
- through seminars and code promotion initiatives

Community shares news

- via the latest news brought to you
- via a monthly newsletter
- via the mailing list
- at our monthly community call
- on our JuRSE Website

JuRSE Code of the Month

Community is open

- to share knowledge
- to meet people with the same challenges
- at Open Hours every week
- on the community online platform
- to attend RSE conferences with a JuRSE travel grant
