DataCite: Connecting Research, Advancing Knowledge

Monday 11 November 2024 09:30 (10 minutes)

This presentation provides an introduction to DataCite, a global non-profit organization dedicated to supporting the research community through persistent identifiers (PIDs). DataCite plays a key role in making research outputs—including datasets, software, and other non-traditional research materials—findable, citable, and interconnected. The talk will highlight the importance of PIDs and rich metadata in enhancing research transparency, visibility, and reusability, and will include real-world examples of the impact of our PID infrastructure.
