Session description:

An overall aim of Arctic PASSION is to co-develop an integrated observing system with a diverse group of stakeholders. In this session we focus on the cooperation with different levels of policy and decision makers. The communication between science and policy is essential in order to make sound decisions and to incorporate policy needs in the development of an effective arctic observing system. How can we implement this dialogue on an international, European, regional and local level? We will discuss this and share good practices. Unfortunately, we will also need to address the impacts of the war in Ukraine on Arctic PASSION. This is an open session for everyone and input and questions are very welcome.
